•	As a result of this intensive campaigning, many Chinese in Inchen have gone over to the Communists, at least nominally. Almost every Chinese household formerly showed a portrait of CHIANG Kairshek, only 50X1-HUI about forty percent of the Chinese families were still displaying the picture. A few Chinese (names and numbers not reported) are believed by their fellow countrymen to be working actively for the Chinese Communists, but most of the Chinese in South Korea are more interested in preserving a noncommittal attitude and refraining from involvement in politics.
